Howard County Times, May 20, 2004 — “Two county companies up for incubator awards”

Two Howard County companies have been named finalists in the 2004 Maryland Incubator Company of the Year awards.

Plethora Technology in Columbia was one of the three finalists in the category of information technology companies and Columbia-based Syntonics LLC was a finalist in the category for graduated companies. Syntonics graduated last year from the Howard County Economic Development Authority’s NeoTech Incubator, which rents space to high-tech start-up companies and provides them with management and administrative assistance.

Award winners will be announced at a June 16 reception at the Center Club in Baltimore.
